Are you interested in addressing key challenges in language education working within a unique European platform?

The European Centre for Modern Languages is launching the Call for project proposals for its next programme, "Language education at the heart of democracy", starting in January 2024, and based on identified priorities in language education of the Centre's member states.

This one-hour webinar will:

- introduce the focus of the Call for proposals and the rationale behind the new programme;
- highlight the most pressing challenges in language education elicited from a recent survey covering policy makers and language education professionals in the 35 member states of the ECML;
- provide information on how to become involved in the Centre's next programme and explain the different possibilities for engagement;
- outline both the benefits and challenges of coordinating/being involved in an ECML project.

The event is aimed at language professionals with an interest in the international context of language education, ECML national contacts and networks cooperating with the Centre. The ECML is also particularly keen to reach out to newcomers and to encourage the next generation of language professionals to engage in its work. This introductory webinar will be followed up by a 2nd event on 12 June focusing specifically on potential project proposal writers.

The webinar will be in English and French.
